The president/CEO came to take over as part-		id. "Fortunately for me, the United Way staff is so professional. One great passion for what it does, and the community benefits. They
"It's been a challenge of the things I've learned deserve a full-time position.
She said that might happen within a few weeks.
"We're in the final stretch. We've got some local candidates and also some from other places, including some already working for United Way."
Rob Doll, Abbott Turner and Richard Anthony are the committee members conducting the search.
"I'm very encouraged," Doll said. "We're well into the interview process. Our next executive board meeting is July 12 and we'd like to be able to make a recommendation then."
He said there is a "multitude" of qualities he's looking for in a president, but most of all the person must have a "passion for helping children and the needy."
Though Mitchell is eager to hand over the reins, she said it's imperative the board make the right choice.
She said the new president must be able to deal with all types of people, connecting to the man on the street but also with CEOs of large companies. The candidate must be a proven leader and have a good knowledge of how a nonprofit organization operates.
"It's different from a regular business," she said.
